

THE WORLD IN MOTION

Charlie Chaplin's
Leading Lady

Edna Purviance

crepe hair hanging from his upper lip. "Mr. Chaplin is an artist, a wonderful musician and a linguist. He has soul, that man has—soul." Miss Purviance's enthusiasm did not surprise me, for we always have said that Mr. Chaplin could play Romeo or Hamlet, if he chose, and we hope some day he will choose, if only to prove our contention.

"And what can you do?" we asked Mr. Chaplin's ally. "Tell us something about yourself." "I?" she said, musingly. "Well, I am Charlie Chaplin's leading lady."

Edna's Protesges
Go to the Front

Edna Goodrich, she of the eyes, is sending some of her splendid saddle horses and hunters to the front.

"My horses can get into action, if I cannot," said the patriotic Miss Goodrich. "I have had standing offers for them ever since war was declared, but I had hoped that they would be able to stay on this side of the Atlantic. Now, I think that they should go where they can do the most good."

Three of them will be used as mounts by United States cavalry officers who are personal friends of Miss Goodrich.

"I have told the captain who has become the possessor of my Australian hunter that if he really wants to get to Berlin all he needs to do is to let Ballarat feel the touch of the spur. When that happens he will start and never stop until he lands on Mr. W. Hohenzollern's front porch."

Miss Goodrich has recently completed five new productions for the Mutual Film Company. They are "Reputation," "A Daughter of Maryland," "Queen X," "American Maid" and "Her Second Husband."

The only other thing which Miss Goodrich cares about besides horses is pictures. She is indefatigable, and has cheerfully given up all recreation to work in the studio.

"I really believe that the reason you hear so many film artists say that they do not like motion picture work is because it interferes with their pleasures. Certainly you cannot be a success in the pictures and continue to shine in society. I never go to the theatre. I seldom go to dinners and all I do is work and sleep. But I never was so happy in my life before, and I think one does well only that which one loves to do."

the same, only, of course, I am taller than little Mary, and she is the sweetest thing and every one loves her, just as every one loves Mr. Chaplin. It seems to me that the greater the artist the greater his heart. It is cause and effect, though it probably works the other way—the greater the heart the greater the artist.

"Mr. Chaplin is so serious. He wouldn't laugh for the world while he is making a picture, and he works so hard. I have heard him, with tears in his eyes, exclaim: 'No, it isn't funny enough yet. It's got to be funnier than that.' And he does such strange things in a perfectly unconscious manner, and no one dares to laugh.

"For instance, that little mustache which he wears is made out of crepe hair, and putting it on each morning is one of the events of the day. You know—or perhaps you don't—that that mustache does not come 'as is.' Mr. Chaplin pastes on crepe hair a foot long and then clips it off neatly to the desired length. Well, usually, when he gets it all ready to shave into the shape, something happens in the studio, and out he rushes with this hair waving wildly behind him. I've seen him talk to tradespeople and even entertain his admirers with two feet of Miss Purviance bears such a startling resemblance to Mary Pickford that we couldn't help exclaiming over it. She smiled and said: "Yes, I am used to that. Mary and I are constantly being taken for each other, particularly at night. We wear the same sort of evening gowns, mostly blue, and our hair is
